Rothesay High School students have partnered with prominent New Brunswick artist Bonny Hill to create a large-scale, temporary art installation recognizing the tragic history of the Sixties Scoop and bringing awareness to the Every Child Matters movement. This is the second in a series of art pieces, with Quispamsis Middle School students completing the powerful Minda Project in June.

Rothesay High School students are learning about the historic roots and modern-day impacts of the Sixties Scoop by exploring it through the visual arts and hearing stories of survivors, such as Joanne Munroe. Joanne, the sister of Minda Burley who was the subject of the first art installation, was taken from her Cree family in Western Canada as a young child and moved to New Brunswick with her adopted family. Students will hear her first-hand account of this experience.

Their artwork will encompass nearly 8k six-inch cardboard squares, individually hand-painted by the students which, once combined, will depict Joanne Munroe's portrait as a child. Intricately assembled across the front field of Rothesay High School.

The students will construct the mosaic throughout the day on Friday, September 30, meticulously arranging each square, one-by-one, on the Rothesay High School front field. The installation will be assembled for one day only. Throughout the day Friday, the community is invited to attend a public viewing, and this will be the only chance to see the completed mosaic.
