

ADVENTURE ON T_{in}

"Brrring, Brrring, Brrring," screeched the old, red school bell. All the kids slowly walked into Sea Side Elementary including me. Amy Sea Side Elementary school was a sea side jail for learning. All the teachers were grouchy old women that were extremely strict. But that's not what matters. Today was a normal boring Thursday until something very strange happened.

I was in my second period math with Mrs. Moulard when we all heard a series of quiet cracking sounds. Everybody sprang from their seats and bolted towards the small jail like window but nothing had happened. Then 5 minutes later the cracking noises started again. This time a little louder. This time when I looked out the little, ugly window I could see that all the skyscrapers now looked like if I took my finger and flicked them they would fall down. I became extremely nervous knowing that could only mean one thing. We were slowly floating away into the dark and black ocean.

"Oh NO", I cried as I jumped up out of my seat. Suddenly many dark eyes starred at me desperately. The school is", I screamed but I was interrupted by a huge, black wave came crashing down on the school as if it was a speck of dust. Then everything went black and I could no longer hear the horrid cries of my friends and my whole body shut down completely.

The bright sun shone on me making my body very hot, the cool breeze tickled my nose tightly and soft sand below me itched horribly. Suddenly my eyes flickered open now wondering what had happened. At first everything was blurry and I could barely pick out the tall palm tree that blew back and forth with the wind. Finally, I could see a beautiful rainforest full of adventures and many unusual trees. There was also many smashed pieces of what was left of our school on the beach. Just then a tiny tear slipped out from my eyes and many awful thoughts crossed my head. Was I the only one alive? Was I dead? There was only one thing that was for sure I was stranded on this island alone and I was going to die. There I was, giving up, laying motionless on the sand crying. In that second there was an awful screeching noise coming from in the water. I wiped the tears away from my eyes and stood up slowly trying to look brave.

There in the water was a large blue whale waiting for me as if he was a taxi driver. Could the whale be my savior? knowing it wasn't a good idea I swam quickly out to the large animal and climbed aboard as if it was a regular morning and I was getting on the bus. I was on the biggest animal on the planet and absolutely nothing could stop me now! I would be at home sweet home soon and I was protected.