two years, and allow graduates to return for a third year to obtain the alternate diploma, allowing students to receive two diplomas in three years if desired.

MCFT has also created and launched a new website, and worked with a local real estate company to have an interactive virtual tour created, which can be accessed using the link to Campus Tours above.

The MFRS/MCFT Alumni Association is in the midst of developing the most extensive entrance scholarship program the college has ever seen. WHAT'S NEW?

NBCC signed numerous pathway agreements in the past year including, an agreement with Cape Breton University (CBU) that provide graduates of NBCC's Criminal Justice: Corrections, Criminal Justice: Police Foundations, Child and Youth Care Worker, and Early Childhood Education programs the ability to transfer their credits to CBU's three- or four-year Bachelor of Arts Community Studies programs. Humber College and NBCC have also entered into an agreement to facilitate the transfer of NBCC students with advanced standing into Humber's Bachelor of Social Science – Criminal Justice degree. In particular: successful graduates of NBCC's Criminal Justice: Police Foundations program will be able to enter Year 3 of the degree; and successful graduates of NBCC's Criminal Justice: Corrections program will be able to enter Year 2, Semester 4 of the degree. Finally, NBCC and Yorkville University have signed an agreement that provides a new pathway for NBCC's business administration diploma graduates to obtain a degree. Students who complete NBCC's two-year Business Administration program can now be awarded transfer credits and directly enter their third year of a Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA) degree at Yorkville University. For more details, visit Pathway Agreements.

NBCC launched a new two-year Social Services Community Worker program. This all-new program will combine skills in social work, behavioural sciences, and humanities to prepare graduates for work with families, groups, and communities. It will incorporate elements of the former Human Services and Child and Youth Care programs and will be designed to enable students to specialize in a specific area of Human Services, such as youth care or elder care. The Child and Youth Care and Human Services programs will no longer be accepting applications. The Social Services Community Worker program will also provide an exit point in the program after the 1st year.

NBCC launched a new Trades Foundation program with an intake in January 2021 and September 2021. The program will create a two-year delivery, with students able to explore multiple trades in the first year and then move into a chosen trade in the second year. The move to a two-year program will be attractive to those students who are thinking about a trade but who are also uncertain about which trade would be the best fit.

Beginning in the Fall of 2020, NBCC will offer many of their programs through a blended delivery model. For more information about how programs will be delivered, please click here.

COVID-19 Protocols

We're here to keep our students safe and so we've put procedures in place to limit physical contact while ensuring you experience the hands-on learning we're known for. These are the Fall 2020 protocols, but please be prepared to adapt to new circumstances as the pandemic situation evolves.

Your student ID/keycard will take care of contact tracing when it is swiped each time you enter the college. Traffic is controlled in the halls on campus with the use of arrows and designated entrances and exits. Community masks are mandatory whenever you are away from your designated physically-distanced work station. Class sizes have been reduced and physical barriers put in place at work stations. If you are experiencing any symptoms, you will not be permitted to come to school, but we will make sure you are able to continue to take part in your coursework at home. Many student life events will shift to a more virtual format, and the George Fry Gallery on campus will be open only to students and faculty. Here is a glimpse of the protocols we have in place, which have since been relaxed due to the zero cases in New Brunswick.

Awards with Separate Deadlines:	St. Thomas has one application for scholarships and one application for bursaries. Both are due on March 1 st .

What’s New

The Bachelor of Arts is the heart of our academic community, with 30 programs offered in the humanities and social sciences. For more than 100 years, our small, supportive community has been bonded by a shared commitment to the liberal arts and social justice.

Campus Tours

We are offering students in the Atlantic travel bubble in-person campus tours, in addition to having virtual campus tour options for students from outside of the travel bubble, as well as those who may be unable to join for an on-campus visit. We encourage anyone who is wondering about their post-secondary options at St. Thomas to book a tour online at stu.ca/campustour or by simply emailing tours@stu.ca.

Open House

This year, St. Thomas University will be holding a virtual Open House on Saturday, November 7th at 10:00 am. The event will allow attendees to experience life as a STUdent, all from the comfort of their own home. Students can register here. Each student who attends will receive information about the application process and next steps, and those who have not yet applied will also be able to have their application fee waived.

Rhodes Scholar

We are pleased to announce that Elizabeth Tuck from Mount Pearl, Newfoundland has been awarded one of 11 prestigious Rhodes Scholarships for Canadian students. Elizabeth completed an Honours in Human Rights at St. Thomas, submitting a thesis entitled “United States Workplace Harassment Jurisprudence in the era of #MeToo,” in addition to majors in Political Science and Great Books.

New Orientation Program

St. Thomas University has launched a new orientation program to complement our existent Welcome Week programming. While Welcome Week primarily helps students forge relationships within the STU community, STUdent Orientation was designed to help students navigate the transition of starting post-secondary, university-level studies at St. Thomas. It is largely focused on helping students cultivate and refine their study skills, time management strategies, ability to use academic tools and technology, and knowledge of services and resources available to them.

New 2SLGBTQQA+ Campus Wellness Coordinator

In addition to our existent Mental Health Coordinator, Healthy Campus Coordinator, International Student Coordinator, Student Accessibility Services Coordinator, and Indigenous Student Services Coordinator, St. Thomas University now has a 2SLGBTQQA+ Campus Wellness Coordinator, Cassidy Wilson. Cassidy provides counselling to students, acts as a resource for student clubs, provides educational sessions and resources to the campus community, and advises the university on matters of policy and programming related to gender identity and sexual orientation.

New Indigenous Experiential Learning Coordinator

In March, St. Thomas University's Office of Experiential and Community-based Learning welcomed Jessica Paul as our new Indigenous Experiential Learning Coordinator. Jessica helps Indigenous students secure experiential learning opportunities, including paid internships, throughout our community. She also has launched an internship program specifically geared towards helping first and second-year Indigenous students develop transferable skills and connections in the campus and local community; several students are completing internships in the program's inaugural year now.

Investments in Online Learning

St. Thomas University has made significant investments in online learning, including hiring two staff members: an educational technologist and an online instructional designer. In addition, STUdents now have access to new online learning technology. These tools include Perusall, which helps to keep students engaged in their readings and with one another and their professors, as well as Panopto, which allows for engaging and dynamic recorded lectures. These investments help to ensure the rigor of courses and quality of instruction now and long after the pandemic.

You can watch our new recruitment video, here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0MdNm-75rdM>. Our digital 2020/2021 Viewbook can be found, here: https://issuu.com/upei/docs/viewbook_2021_22.

UPEI will soon have its fourth residence on campus. The new 260-bed building will bring the capacity of university housing from 9.4 percent of the student body to 15 percent. The infrastructure project is expected to be done by the end of 2022 and complete UPEI's transition to a temporary athletes' village for the 2023 Canada Winter Games. Following the games, the residence will provide year-round housing for post-secondary students.

UPEI's Applied Climate Change program has just announced the addition of a brand new climate change research centre that will be built in St. Peters, PEI. The 45,000 square-foot facility will have research, teaching and learning spaces. There will also be 50 residence rooms, made up of both one- and two-bedroom suites. The $18.5 million project is being jointly funded by the provincial and federal government.

Students in the Faculty of Sustainable Design Engineering lent a hand to fighting COVID-19 this year by building ventilators. They also worked directly with PEI Public Health to design and produce personal protective equipment that can be sterilized and reused to keep provincial healthcare workers safe.
